

#PeopleMakePetrofac

Var Wakefield

What gets me up in the morning is knowing that I'm coming into a team of really wonderful people and some really interesting technical challenges as well every day that are needing to be solved.

One of the things I'm most proud of is I have a few younger engineers working for me who were given the opportunity to go into and what is quite a challenging role, and was able to put in the support that they needed to make sure they could do that role well. And all of them are right now flourishing in their new positions, and I'm really proud to see that I've sort of been able to let them go and they're doing really, really well.

We are at a point now where we've got 40 years of experience behind us, but there's a lot of change in industry and that how do we take what we've done in the past and apply to the future is a really exciting time.

I believe that people definitely make Petrofac really lucky that people are both very friendly and open and easy to work with, but also very competent, very experienced.